

Justice-Doing in Community Work and Therapy: Solidarity Groups & Collective Care
Facilitated by Vikki Reynolds

This workshop will be informed by a spirit of solidarity and social justice activism. Vikki will illuminate her stance for an ethic of Justice-Doing as a frame for community work and therapy. With this, she will invite and challenge us to consider the intersections, tensions and affinities between community work practice and social justice activism that encompasses: centering ethics, doing solidarity, addressing power, fostering collective sustainability, critically engaging with language and structuring safety.

During the day together we also will:

- Do practice together in a Solidarity Group
- Witness a live interview and develop witnessing practices
- Critique ourselves from an ethical stance of Justice-doing – i.e. asking “are we walking our talk?”
- Look at our relationship to holding clients at the centre of our work, and that leads us to collective care and the Zone of Fabulousness

This workshop will be relevant to those working in the areas of addiction, substance misuse, diversity, homelessness, trauma and violence.
